

Once again about the feasibility and priority within the framework of energy-informational diagnostic and therapy methods

IN last thing time appeared sensation over-passion electropuncture vegetative resonance test to the detriment of the use of adaptive bioresonance therapy devices.

Any reasonable action is reasonable when it is expedient, i.e. corresponds to a conscious goal. What goal or super task should be solved doctor?! The answer is obvious - to restore functionality to restore organism, conditions outside and inside the body to optimize self-regulation, i.e. mechanisms homeostasis.

Within the framework of energy-information technologies, this task is achieved by synchronizing the field frequency-wave continuum in the body, by inverting aperiodic (disharmonic) and strengthening harmonic oscillations.

Vegetative resonance test allows you to highlight certain components of these characteristics. This makes it possible to diagnose and select a more optimal algorithm for correcting the wave continuum.

At first glance, this statement seems to be obvious. But it is also obvious that there is a hierarchy of various levels and varieties of frequency-wave characteristics, both disharmonious and harmonic. And it is also obvious that the number of sources of such radiation tends to infinity. And the testing process is sequential, discrete, and therefore always selective, depending on the thought patterns and goals of the mind of the operator. Thus, with such testing, we will never be able to test the entire range of wave "emitters" that are significant for the body at every present and in subsequent moments of time. This is where methodological miscalculations arise, discrediting the technique, when different doctors give priority to the causation of diseases, either worms, or viruses, or allergens, then the ecological or psychological components and, accordingly, they test what they want, but, of course, not everything that is needed, and often what is not needed. As a result, the main super task is not solved - the patient does not recover, but passes from one disharmonious state to another, but not to the optimal one.

But the device for endogenous adaptive bioresonance therapy works universally and automatically always guaranteed to reduce the level of entropy inside the body.

Therefore, any patient with any degree of pathology should always begin treatment with the obligatory use of this particular device, at least in the basic strategy mode.

Moreover, if you carry out 5-10 consecutive procedures, then, as a rule, in almost any pathology, a pronounced effect occurs, regardless of whether the doctor and the patient are aware of the diagnosis or not, since the device automatically solves the main super task - the suppression of the entire series of aperiodic oscillations in the wave the continuum of the body with the simultaneous strengthening and restoration of harmonious (healthy) characteristics.

So way application instrument BRT is an most expedient, i.e. corresponding to the achievement of the main goal.

But since the BRT device is, in fact, an open nonlinear system, then, accordingly, it allows, during the process of exposure, to introduce additional wave signals into the control system. It is to select these additional wave stimuli that it is advisable to use ART and electropuncture diagnostics according to R. Voll's method in order to optimize the process of therapy and regulation, in order to reduce the time and resources spent by the body in the process of recovery.

In this regard, many years of experience with the devices of the "IMEDIS" company makes one more conclusion: the effectiveness of therapy does not greatly increase from the expansion of the selector and enthusiasm for vegetative testing, but it increases significantly with the correct goal-setting (with the correct construction of the tree chain in relation to each patient in the course of therapy) to achieve the main super task - the synchronization of wave processes in the patient's body. And the main tool in the movement towards this goal, of course, is precisely the device for endogenous bioresonance therapy, and all other devices only allow to optimize this process and more effectively reflect in the mind of the doctor-operator the hierarchy of subgoals in the process of goal-setting.

For more than ten years of work with the devices of the firm "IMEDIS", I had to try out various schemes and algorithms for their application, various strategies. Naturally, I wanted to find the most effective and optimal ones. For some nosological forms of pathology, certain specific strategies, of course, significantly increased efficiency.

But it was paradoxical that, in general, for most diseases, the effectiveness of treatment when using only template sessions of the basic BRT strategy without any testing and diagnostics was not much different from the many more laborious multiresonance options with a large number of tests, induction tests, induction programs, sophisticated schemes and algorithms. offered annually by doctors at regular annual conferences.

The conclusion suggests itself - devices for bioresonance therapy (and specifically endogenous BRT), selectively suppressing disharmonic oscillations in an automatic mode, have the property of universality and make a weak and average doctor who cannot think systematically and rationally simply as a free application to this technology. But for the patient, given the device always gives an average guarantee of the effectiveness of treatment and protection from unprofessionalism of the doctor.

So, in my opinion, it is worth focusing attention on engineers on the perfected exactly endogenous bioresonance appliances and technologies for the therapy of patients and rehabilitation and optimization, increasing the amount of health of healthy people.

And the diagnostic and testing systems, of course, are also important and require further improvement, but only as an addition to the main thing. In the end, the patient always does not care what his diagnosis is, and from what.

But if his condition is guaranteed to change towards recovery, simply and universally, and at the same time almost without the participation of a doctor, then it is really brilliant and, probably, this is the future.
