The use of homeopathic remedies and food in the method of vegetative resonance test as filters for homeopathic and bioresonance therapy O.A. Postnikova, E.V. Postnikova (Department of Homeopathy and Electropuncture Medicine IPK FMA RF, JSC "INTERMED", Moscow, Russia)

The homeopathic preparation selected for treatment by the ART method increases the patient's adaptive reserves. When testing by the ART method with an increase in its potency, a reaction of excessive stimulation of the body occurs, which is manifested by a deterioration of electrical indicators at the studied biologically active point (BAP), if the agent is not very suitable at this stage of work or is not quite "similar".

However, such an increased potency of the drug poses a new task for the body, and if then such an enhanced drug is used as a filter or load, this can lead to the selection of a second drug that helps to tolerate the enhanced first drug. This second is a more suitable tool at the next stage of work, possibly working in another area, due to violations in which a stronger effect of the first drug is impossible. The second means will make the first portable by a new increase in adaptation reserves. Then, it is possible to use the first drug in a higher potency for treatment, which indicates the development of a higher level of the body's ability, or the selection of the next remedy, which will make it possible to use the second drug in a higher potency. Thus, you can build a chain of drugs, which will significantly and at the same time harmoniously increase resources, make the patient insensitive to stress loads, and adapt his various systems of regulation to different types of loads. Thus, the use of a gradual increase in the potency of the selected drugs can be considered as a system of training and development of weak, lagging organs and tissues in various fields of activity.

Another option for using homeopathic remedies as filters in ART is the use of "evolutionary filters".

The use of "evolutionary" filters, starting with preparations of mammalian milk, especially the higher ones, allows you to adjust the treatment program to overcome developmental delays, regressive conditions, and clearly define the tasks on this path of development. To do this, against the background of a mammalian milk filter, preparations of the mineral, then the plant, then the animal kingdom are tested, starting from the lower stages of development: mollusks, arthropods, vertebrates, starting with fish, then, birds, reptiles, mammals, then we looked at nosodes separately.

This testing usually solves

majority

general body tasks revealed by other tests on ART.

using

Acceleration of work and its simplification occurs when polarizer GSHK, with its effect, the amount of medicinal necessary drugs is reduced.

This definition of developmental tasks by "evolutionary" filters is useful in bioresonance therapy (BRT), which makes it possible to solve more quickly common tasks of the whole organism.

Food can become a variant of filters in ART. The control of the homeopathic or BRT therapy can be carried out according to the tolerance of the products, which is tested by the ART method. At the same time, intolerance to animal products speaks, as a rule, of the need to use homeopathic preparations of the animal kingdom, rather the corresponding group of products - marine, with intolerance to fish and seafood, preparations from mammals - with intolerance to mammalian meat and milk, preparations from reptiles and birds with intolerance to eggs or bird meat, and intolerance to plant products indicates the probable use of preparations of the plant kingdom, moreover, more often ,

of the corresponding botanical family.

Mineral homeopathic remedies are less specific, or more versatile and can be useful in a wide variety of cases of food intolerance detected by ART.

Thus, the use of various potencies of homeopathic remedies as filters in ART, taking into account their belonging to different kingdoms, as well as food products, taking into account their intolerance, allow choosing the path of treatment with homeopathic medicines and BRT with the solution of general developmental problems.
