

Female and male infertility

"Disease is a drama in two acts, of which the first is played out in the gloomy silence of our tissues with extinguished candles," wrote the French surgeon Leriche, "when pain or other unpleasant phenomena appear, it is almost always the second act." That is why a person always needs to know how to prevent the development of the disease and restore lost health. To become and be healthy, you need to understand on what principles full-fledged health is built. Very rarely, the disease comes suddenly. It often accumulates gradually over several years. No doctor can single-handedly prevent a disease if the patient himself is not actively involved.

Most people believe that their health should be protected by medical professionals and the public health system. This position is naive to say the least.

Health, like life, is personal wealth. How a person disposes of them depends on his desire, knowledge and skills. We acquire health along with life, as a necessary accessory, and do not think about it until we lose it. At the same time, health obeys the general laws inherent in the UNIVERSE, and only when a person violates these laws, disease comes.

"What a person does not understand, that he does not own," - said Goethe.

This means that in order to become and be healthy, one must understand on what principles full-fledged health is built. There is only one way by which health can be restored: to return to such a way of life, which is prescribed to man by nature.

In recent years, the interest of many people in the issues of healing and biocorrection of chronic diseases with the help of natural methods (air, water, food, movement, light), as well as bioresonance treatment, has significantly increased.

And this is natural, for reasons, the main among which are the following:

1. An increase in the number of chronic diseases that are not always successful can be cured with drugs, because medicine is not omnipotent.
2. Doctors of official, allopathic medicine associate treatment with the use of medicines.
3. Few people do not use the psychotherapeutic power of words and beliefs.
4. Often offer pseudoscientific recommendations for a healthy lifestyle life and traditional methods of treatment;
5. There is a large flow of non-professional, devoid of critical comprehending information.

Note that writing wellness programs is a very "convenient type of creativity": it, like playing chess, makes it possible to come up with many combinations (change the food set of the diet, alter the food intake, describe new ways of cleansing the body), and you are the author of a new method.

A complete healing system was created in ancient civilizations. Then the disease was considered as a process resulting from a violation normal relationships, both in the body itself and between the human body and nature. Any disease is a violation of the functions of the whole organism, therefore, a complex effect is necessary with natural methods.

"Not a single thing arises without cause, but everything arises on some basis or by force of necessity" (Democritus).

Health is a physiological synonym for happiness. But what is health? Health is complete physical, spiritual, mental and social well-being. Physical health is completely dependent on mental health. The task of the mind is to be always dissatisfied. If a person does not realize this, then he will not achieve spiritual and social well-being. The feeling of happiness does not give a person the opportunity to freeze in a state of rest, and therefore he begins to seek. Happiness is unity. But we always miss the second half of the mystery: how to ensure that this feeling of happiness never ends.

One can free oneself from time and achieve eternal happiness by uniting opposites at the level of consciousness.

Realizing this, you will embark on the path of knowing yourself. In the east, this state is called yoga. In Sanskrit, this word means "yoke", "yoke", "yoke". A yoke (rocker) combines two objects into one. This is the art of uniting the dual into one. It is enough to remember and understand the esoteric principle "both at the top and at the bottom". If a person has sexual problems, he should solve them at the bodily level, instead of seeking refuge in flight. Freud reduced almost all human problems to sexuality. But he has one mistake, from the level of concrete manifestation to the principle behind it. Sexuality is only one of the possible forms of polarity manifestation. Freud is absolutely right in the sense that most people are faced with the problem of opposite poles, primarily at the level of sexuality,

Restoration of reproductive capacity

Monthly bleeding is a form of femininity, the ability to conceive and bear a fetus. The woman is subject to this rhythm. She is forced to submit to him and the limitations associated with him. "Submit"

- the concept of femininity - the ability to bestow. Conception is the world's primary way of giving oneself.

The ability to give oneself is a rejection of the active principle. The symbols of femininity are the Moon and Water. Male symbols are Sun and Fire. The Moon and Water are able to perceive, absorb and reflect light and heat. Water refuses to take any form. She adjusts, obeys.

In the oppositions Sun - Moon, Fire - Water, Masculine - Feminine, there is no assessment. Evaluation is meaningless, because both poles are imperfect, they have no integrity that can be achieved by fully giving up their specific features. Imagine a Water that complains that it cannot burn or shine, and would be so stupid that she would have concluded her own inferiority. One pole is neither better nor worse than the other. He's just different. Due to the fact that the poles are different, there is a tension that we call Life. Trying to equalize them, we will not achieve unity. Dissatisfaction with one's own femininity is the main cause of menstrual irregularities and many other symptoms associated with sexuality.

The ability to give oneself, to agree is a very difficult task for a person. This requires a rejection of one's own Ego, from the desire for domination. You have to sacrifice yourself. As a rule, violations occur if women do not agree to it. Violations indicate that some instance of a woman (often unconscious) does not want to give herself to a man. It is this "I don't want" that is the reason. The point is that these repressed claims of dominance are too great for them to agree (fear of femininity, sexuality, conception, motherhood). In a situation of intense fear, a woman often stops menstruating.

If a woman dreams of becoming a mother, the onset of bleeding for her is evidence that "again nothing happened." In this case, the woman's mood deteriorates (loss of faith in herself and the joy of life, blocking of the system). But if a woman is afraid of getting pregnant, then she is looking forward to menstruation. This can lead to delayed or painful periods. Also, menstruation can be used as an instrument of power, in order to get more attention and care or to avoid intimacy.

Menstruation is controlled by the female hormone estrogen and the male hormone progesterone. The interaction of these hormones corresponds to "sexuality at the hormonal level." If "hormonal sexuality" is violated, then the menstrual cycle is disrupted. Such disorders are difficult to cure with the help of medications, because hormones are the material representatives of the male and female parts of the soul. You can recover by reconciling yourself to your own role in the separation of the sexes, because this role is a prerequisite for the realization of the opposite sex in oneself.

Striving for truth and self-knowledge, a person must abandon generally accepted criteria, take the path of an honest attitude towards himself. As long as a person is convinced that it is necessary to have certain traits and correspond to certain norms of behavior, he will, willy-nilly, suppress those impulses that do not fit into the generally accepted scheme. Suppressed impulses appear as physical symptoms. You will say: "It has nothing to do with me!" But there is a subconscious rejection that you do not admit your true motives even to yourself.

Menopause signals that a woman has lost fertility
- the main form of manifestation of femininity.

There are a variety of emotional responses (fear, irritability, lack of sex drive, and more). All unfulfilled and innermost desires are manifested in the form of fear of not being able to do something, lead to panic and the desire at all costs to make up for lost time. As long as "I" wants something, it cannot achieve anything. Inclination to occupy the dominant the position expresses the masculine principle and prevents a woman from fully tune in to fulfilling a female role.

The masculine principle is associated with action, creation and fulfillment. The masculine principle is active and therefore aggressive. Potency is a symbol of power, and impotence is powerlessness. Behind impotence lies the fear of its own beginning. Impotence is a fear of femininity (fear of threat, capture, absorption). This reveals a weak identification of one's masculine principle with the attributes of power and aggression.

Considering any sexual problems, we must not forget that in the soul of every person there are both masculine and feminine aspects, and both of them must develop [2].

Case description

Patient N., 25 years old. I turned to the KALKHIVI Health Recovery Center for help. Complaints about the inability to get pregnant, the absence of a menstrual cycle. According to the patient, the menses stopped two years ago. She was treated with hormonal drugs. No result has been achieved.

When carrying out diagnostics using ART "IMEDIS-TEST", the patient's condition was determined. The causal relationships of infertility with the violation of the physical and psychological state of health of the patient have been established. The leading constitutionally significant factors that influenced the development of infertility were also identified.

- a high degree of psychological stress, in the form of endogenous psychosis;
- violation of mesenchymal-metabolic metabolism (biological indices - 13/17/19; photon indices - 15/18; adaptation reserves - low level 2);
- very strong endocrine disorders are determined - 4 levels;
- Depletion of the immune system - high;
- hormonal problems (absence of menstruation, violation of thyroid and pancreatic hormones);
- polycystic ovaries (disorders in the exchange of hormones);
- ovarian dysfunction.

Based on the results of diagnostics, the patient was prescribed treatment with a combined method of ART and BRT, in particular, using an algorithm of multilevel systemic adaptive diagnostics and therapy, and frequencies for the treatment of this pathology were also selected.

The results of therapy were assessed in several ways: 1.

Assessment of the patient's subjective state.

2. Results of clinical trials.

3. Data from laboratory tests.

4. Instrumental methods (ultrasound, MRI, ART).

On 08.12.2012, treatment began at the KALKHIVI Central Exhibition Hall. In the course of therapy, drugs were used that corrected the patient's condition at all levels of integration of self-realization. Informational BR-preparations were made on devices "IMEDIS", "Golden Section" and GShK. Prescribed drugs corresponded to the "level of disease development" according to the MRADT algorithm.

The psychological attitude of the patient is fundamental. It is necessary to try to rebuild the psychological attitude already at the first meeting. Particular attention should be paid to the problem of latent fear, since patients with fear in the subconscious are no longer able to change their psychological mood themselves, even if they realize the need for it.

As a rule, the restoration of reproductive abilities cannot be achieved through exposure only to the human genitourinary system. Complex treatment and rehabilitation measures were carried out, which included:

- anti-inflammatory and detoxification therapy;
- antibacterial and antimycotic therapy;
- restoration of intestinal flora in order to increase general and local immunity;
- detection of biosynthesis disorders in the body, in particular, in the small and large intestines;
- restoration of hormonal homeostasis;
- restoration of hormone levels depending on the phase of the cycle and correction of the cycle;
- Revealing the depth of the problem, according to the Revicis table of trace elements;
- identifying a weak organ and targeting a target marker at it.

This serious approach allowed us to influence the immune system as a whole, improving local protection at the level of the epithelium of the small intestine, which is involved in the complex mechanism of secretion and release of interleukins and interferons, which are important immune complexes.

Secretion is the process of releasing biologically active substances. The organs that secrete secretions are called glands. Secretion in humans includes: Glandular secretion of the gastrointestinal tract:

- digestive enzymes;
- hydrochloric acid;
- bile acid;
- hormones of the digestive system;
- pulmonary secretion;
- surfactants;
- endocrine secretion;
- sex and other hormones.

Fertility treatment is a long and rather complicated process.

The treatment was carried out in a complex way: the method of bioresonance diagnosis and treatment integrated with psychoanalysis.

As a result of therapy, the patient had a long-awaited pregnancy. Patient follow-up continues with minimal intervention on our part. The most dangerous is the first trimester, when intrauterine fetal death can occur and there is a threat of termination of pregnancy.

Much attention is paid to psychocorrection of a pregnant woman. Such cooperation allows us to coordinate actions in time and develop a unified tactics for managing pregnancy.

Our health recovery center witnessed the birth of ten babies.

Our children grow up healthy and strong.
